Thank you for your interest in the post of Senior Environmental Assessment and Advice Officer with Historic Environment Scotland. This post is based at Longmore House, although flexibility on location is possible using hybrid working. Occasional travel will be required.

This is a permanent and pensionable appointment.

As Senior Environmental Assessment and Advice Officer you will work directly to the Deputy Head and assist in the delivery of Historic Environment Scotland's role in providing advice to planning authorities, developers and others on the potential impacts of development on the historic environment. Based in The Environmental Assessment and Advice Team, you will be responsible for responding to consultations from the development community and their agents, local authorities and other public bodies on behalf of the agency. This includes consultations on projects going through the Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA) process and Development Plans and their associated Strategic Environmental Assessment (SEA).

About us

We are the lead body for Scotland's historic environment; a charity dedicated to the advancement of heritage, culture, education and environmental protection. We're at the forefront of researching and understanding the historic environment and addressing the impact of climate change on its future. We investigate and record architectural and archaeological sites and landscapes across Scotland and care for more than 300 properties of national importance. We have a People Strategy, which is an overarching strategy to ensure we support and develop staff within the organisation.

Our Vision

Our vision is that Scotland's historic environment is cherished, understood, shared and enjoyed with pride by everyone.

Our Priorities

- The historic environment makes a real difference to people's lives
- The historic environment is looked after, protected and managed for the generations to come
- The historic environment makes a broader contribution to the economy of Scotland and it's people
- The historic environment inspires a creative and vibrant Scotland
- The historic environment is cared for and championed by a high performing organisation

Overview of the post and information about the team

Historic Environment Scotland has a wide range of responsibilities for the historic environment, including statutory functions within the planning system. Historic Environment Scotland's Planning, Consents and Advice Service (PCAS) provides expert advice on the protection, conservation and management of Scotland's historic buildings, historic landscapes and archaeological sites. You would be based within the Environmental Assessment and Advice Team within PCAS. The Environmental Assessment and Advice Team has responsibility for handling casework to fulfil Historic Environment Scotland's duties for a range of matters including Development Planning, SEA and EIA. The work of the team contributes to Scotland's economic development by providing advice in the planning system. The team also contributes directly to efforts to address the Climate Emergency by providing expert advice on developments which are being proposed to mitigate and adapt to climate change.

Key responsibilities, duties and objectives

We are looking for an enthusiastic individual who can manage a full and varied caseload and who will be committed to the delivery of the of the team duties to a high standard. You will be familiar with development planning and/or development management procedures and have some experience in their practical application. Detailed knowledge of the historic environment itself is not vital but you should have good analytical skills and a broad understanding of how the planning system can assist Historic Environment Scotland in delivering its responsibilities for the protection and management of the historic environment. Practical experience in having undertaken and/or reviewed the adequacy of EIA and SEA outputs is also desirable.

- Managing and co-ordinating Historic Environment Scotland's advice on a range of national and major developments at all stages of the EIA process in liaison with other colleagues within PCAS, including a strong focus pre-application engagement for renewable and other EIA developments
- Engaging with the development community and public bodies to promote the historic environment at an early stage in development proposals in line with the requirements of the Planning Acts
- Representing Historic Environment Scotland's interests at meetings with a range of organisations engaged in the development planning, SEA and EIA processes (including the Scottish Government, local authorities, consultants and public bodies)
- Providing expert advice to developers and planning authorities on the EIA process and the assessment of impacts from development proposals on the historic environment
- Keeping up to date with issues and developments in the planning system, e.g. policy changes, procedures, tools and techniques and their application to the historic environment
- Providing help and advice to communities and the public seeking clarification on the role of Historic Environment Scotland in the planning process
- Supporting the Deputy Head in providing advice on Historic Environment Scotland's role to senior management and others within the organisation. This will include advice, where required on our role in the planning system.
